JESUS BETRAYED AND DENIED.

Jesus had made his last address to his disciples, majestic, incomparable, convincing great affection and solicitude. He had anticipated his high priestly office by the utterance of a prayer. Now he was out of Jerusalem by the dry course of Kedron, deep and tenebrous. Would he not remember that his great ancestor, King David, had gone that way a thousand years before, with hooded head and unsundered feet, weeping as he went, over the periphery of his son Absalom? The trying place of Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane is perfectly well known to the traitor. Jesus could easily have gone somewhere else and thus for a time at least have eluded his enemies. He did not. His hour was come. When he saw the lights and heard voices and footfalls he said, "Rise, let us go," and advanced to meet his betrayer. The most heinous deed of all history is matched by as odious a sign, the betrayal of Jesus and his identification by means of a kiss from the lips of the traitor. The receding and sudden prostration of the whole arresting party can be accounted for upon purely psychological grounds and is not without parallel instances. Twice the Master demands to know whom they seek and twice he answers to the name of "Jesus, the Nazarene." His purpose in this was to insure the safety of his disciples for he said "it is I." The man at the moment his hand was stretched out toward his covering companions. Peter's rebuke follows. He whips out a sword, which he had no right to be carrying on a feast day. He strikes to kill, but his aim is erring and the slight damage done is instantly repaired. In his excitement Peter must have continued brandishing his blade, else Jesus would not have needed to command him to sheath it. The shameful lapse of Peter is also true to psychology. From the high nervous tension which led to the foolish attempt at defense the swing of the pendulum to an arrant cowardice in the last degree natural. There was just a step between the wielding of a sword to the reiterated denial of any acquaintance with Jesus. Fortifying the denial with an oath was next in order. That there is no effort to palliate the offense even though Peter may have been living when the account was written is incidental evidence of the genuineness of the narrative. That Jesus plainly recognized the ignominious and violent arrest as part of the program of suffering to which he was appointed and to which he had made his final and complete submission in that very place is evident from his sublime words "The cup that my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" So he allowed himself to be seized and bound by the whole posse armed with sticks and staves although he did protest against it as unnecessary. They acted as if the quiet and calm teacher was some malefactor about to resist arrest with violence.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

There is hardly an illustrious character of history whose followers were more disloyal to him than were the disciples of Jesus. Thomas doubted. Peter denied. Judas betrayed. All forsook. Yet it is an open question whether his disciples of today in proportion to their opportunities and privileges are more loyal. Indeed were not those first faults typical of those current now? The very frankness of the narrative is sign of its authenticity. It is absolutely ingenuous. Faults are drawn to life while those who committed them were still living. No attempt is made to gloss or palliate. Judas was really no disciple. His spirit was distinctly un-Christian. He had never surrendered his will to God.

The retreat and prostration of the band while in the act of arresting Jesus need not be looked upon as miraculous. There are analogous instances. Mahomet by a word or look could disarm assassins. So could Admiral Coligny, although he did finally fall in the St. Bartholomew massacre. A Gallic trooper sent to dispatch Marius quailed before the fire in his eyes and fled crying "I cannot kill Gaius Marius!" No other events in Jesus' life are related with greater wealth of incident than his betrayal and denial. The minute particularity bespeaks the eye-witness. For example the brook crossed is Kedron, the garden entered was the favorite resort of Jesus. The place was known to Judas. The arresting band was equipped with torches and weapons. Twice when challenged the officers answered that they sought "Jesus, the Nazarene." It was the right ear of the high priest's servant that Peter cut off and his name was Malchus. The chief captain or military tribune was present. The other disciple who followed Jesus had the entrance of the place secured. Peter's admission. It was the maid who acted as portress who first taxed Peter with being a Nazarene. It was a cold night. Peter warmed himself at the fire. Jean d'Arc was repeating the words of Jesus when in answering the misleading title of his authoritative book "The Future of War" affirms paradoxically that war has no future; that the implements of destruction are now so perfect that any use of them must lead to a drawn game in which both parties will suffer exhaustion and secured the entrance of the place. "They that take the sword will perish by the sword." The quest of doctrinal proof-texts enters its strange and absurd phase when it is sought to find proof of the divinity of the Lord in the use of the phrase "I am" in acknowledging himself to be Jesus the Nazarene, that expression in Hebrew being the unspeakable name (Jehovah).

June 3, 1917. Nehemiah VI. 16 CONFIDENCE AND HOW TO GET IT.

Fear is a shadow. It is unreal and indefinable. It suggests the intuitively of work. It bids one hide behind some closed door. It anticipates evil. It is the quintessence of pessimism, querulous and forbidding. It paralyzes. It has never achieved anything but demoralization and destruction. Faith on the contrary is a rock, stable and unshifting. It establishes and renders firm support, giving substance to the best hopes. Every human triumph in art, science, commerce, religion or any other sphere is achieved by faith. It is what makes the dream come true. By faith Columbus found America. By faith Galileo turned the first telescope upon the heavenly bodies. By faith Michael Angelo "saw" the Pantheon in the air. By faith Fallacy the Potter rediscovered the glaze for china. By faith Leverrier indicated the spot in the heavens where Neptune would be found. By faith Raphael painted the Sistine Madonna. By the same means and in the same way all the achievements of religion are accomplished. Prayer for the increase of faith should be persistent.

ALLOW NO INCREASE TO NORMAL SCHOOLS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., June 1.—The normal schools lost their fight in the assembly for an increase in their appropriation by $155,000 in the lower house of the Wisconsin legislature last night by one vote. After a long debate the assembly refused to kill the V. V. Miller amendment for an increase of $155,000. The next vote showed 37 to 38 against adopting the amendment and it was killed.

The normal school appropriation bill goes to the governor, just as it came from the senate. On motion of assemblyman Buckley the rules were suspended and the Miller substitute increasing the appropriation to $155,000 was given consideration. An amendment by Young was adopted striking out a provision for $3,000 for the improvement of a normal school site at Rhinelander. Everett objected to this provision saying that the state had not accepted the site. The Young amendment also restored a provision of the original bill limiting the salary of the secretary of the board of normal regents to $3,000. The Miller substitute removed this limitation placed there by the legislature of 1915.

Assemblyman Smith of Clark county and Everett spoke against the substitute. Miller said the amendment was a fifty-fifty proposition. It divided the difference between the amount recommended by the state board of education and the joint committee on finance. Everett said that the bill increased the biennial amount at the Superior normal by $11,000 and he said that this school had said it could get along on the sum allowed for these purposes. After the Miller substitute was killed the bill was engrossed and concurred in. It was immediately messaged back to the senate and will go at once to the governor.

MISSOURI MAN CARRIES RANSOM TO KIDNAPERS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Springfield, Mo., June 1.—J. Holland Keep, returned home today after a night's drive in an automobile over the hills of Greene county, presumably carrying ransom money said to have been demanded by captors of his young son, Lloyd. Despite his request that no one follow him, more than a dozen automobiles are said to have trailed the car. Their presence is thought to have prevented any negotiations between the kidnapers and the boy's father.

What Are You Going To Do About It? There's Opportunity To "Do Your Bit"

By Frank R. Wilson, Federal Farm Loan Bureau, U. S. Treasury Department.

(Written for the Gazette.)

Washington, June 1.—A great war is a nation's supreme test. To conduct a war successfully requires the marshaling of all the nation's resources as well as its physical strength. It is the part of the young men to make the physical strength felt on the firing line. It is the part of those who cannot give their services at the front to fill in the ranks that the men who are playing and to keep up the nation's efficiency. It is the part of those who can afford it to lend their capital to enable the nation to prosecute the war with the greatest effectiveness.

The Liberty Loan offers this opportunity to every American patriot. It is inconceivable that the people of the United States will ever be called upon to meet the privations which this war forced upon the people of Europe. European nations have already expended fifty billions of dollars of their resources to prosecute the war and their people have given, not only their lives, but they have subjected themselves to tremendous sacrifices in every way. Five million European homes have been visited by death itself. Fine cities have given place to ruins. Rich and poor have gone to the wall. Individual liberty has been sacrificed to national unity of action in order to gain national efficiency. Women, who have been accustomed to fine clothes and the constant round of entertainment, have taken their place as laborers in munition factories.

All of this sacrifice has been made for a cause that is as much ours as theirs. The violation of the neutrality of Belgium was just as much an affront to America as to Great Britain. German autocracy threatens the perpetuity of free institutions everywhere alike.

The important thing now is for Americans to realize that this is a war, and as participants we must do our utmost to bring it to a successful conclusion. The thing which is most available and can be given at once is our wealth. It is the patriotic duty, therefore, of every American to help make the Liberty Loan an overwhelming success.

It is the universal privilege of Americans to take this first step in helping the fighting allies without great sacrifice. Then if you do not wish to place your subscription on the basis of patriotism, you might reasonably place it on the basis of investment. A 3 1/2 per cent government bond, tax free, is an excellent investment.

The purchase of Liberty Bonds to the extent of $5 means that you are lending your resources to pay the wages of one soldier for ten days in the trenches of France. Surely you can do that much. Many can do much. Let your response to the Liberty Loan be your approval of the words of President Wilson:

"The right is more precious than peace and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit their lives to government, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself free."

To such a task we can dedicate our eyes and our fortunes, everything that we have with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America has been called upon to shed her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured.

HAWAIIANS AND ARMENIANS OFFER TO FIGHT FOR U. S.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

JOHNNY BULL TO RAISE MONEY BY CANINE TAXES

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

London, June 1.—Dogs are in Dutch with the British government and are to be taxed accordingly. Bonar Law announced in commons a proposed increased taxation on all canines. There will be a slight increase on people already owning a license for one dog, but each additional dog in the family will be taxed at a higher scale and an extreme tax is to be imposed on new owners of dogs.

BILL CONTEMPLATES IMPORTANT CHANGES IN TAXATION LAWS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., June 1.—If the legislature passes the bill which has been introduced by Senator Bray, for a special interim committee to inquire into the question of taxation in Wisconsin, the result may be recommendations of a sweeping character for changes in the Wisconsin taxation laws.

The Bray bill has passed the senate and will be before the assembly early next week. Under the terms of the bill, the scope of the work of the committee is unlimited and can go over the entire taxation question in Wisconsin. It said the committee will inquire not only into personal property taxation, but into the question as to whether or not real estate is being fairly taxed in this state and that if the bill passes and Mr. Bray is allowed to follow out his plan, the inquiry will result in one of the most thorough inquiries into the taxation question that has ever been carried on in Wisconsin. Whether or not the bill for the special committee will pass the assembly is a question, as there are in some sources of opposition to interim committees being created at this session of the legislature.

Many members believe committees will not accomplish any great results, if appointed, on account of the war situation, and that it is a poor time to make extended inquiries into any subject with a view to special legislation. Mr. Bray is anxious that his bill for a special committee on taxation shall pass. He believes there are some gross inequalities as regards the taxation burden under existing tax laws, and it is his belief that work should be begun as soon as possible to remedy these inequalities.

Wisconsin is to be the pioneer in another important move in the way of obtaining accurate statistics on the wage compensation insurance question.

One of the most important bills which has been passed by this legislature is a measure which has attracted little attention, but which is a bill which probably will mean as much to the industries of Wisconsin as any bill which has been passed in recent years. The bill in question provides that the insurance commissioner, one member of the industrial commission, and a special man to be appointed shall have the power to revise the liability insurance rates of the state. Under this bill there is contemplated the making of some thorough statistics on the subject of accidents insurance, where such accidents come within the scope of the wage compensation act with a view to arranging figures as to what liability insurance should cost for the protection of wage compensation losses.

NEWS VS. CENSOR.

They are having a terrible time down in Washington these days over the proposed censorship restrictions to the press. It is a bill that has caused much discussion and trouble for the politicians who thrive on publicity. They do not trust the newspapers to print news and have confidence in their loyalty not to print news that would be of advantage to the enemy. An eastern exchange, in commenting on the situation, sums it up in the following language:

"The collection and presentation of news is not fortuitous, it is an exact science requiring training and experience like any other science. The editorial interpretation of the meaning of news is an art. Added to the indispensable technical knowledge of news-gathering, imagination and insight are necessary to bring out the meaning of recorded events. It is reporting in its highest form. It draws out what is implied in the news, but not expressed."

"It is because censorships are conducted by those ignorant of the science, to say nothing of the art of news presentation, that they are so ridiculous and futile. The United States senate, perceiving this clearly, has proposed in the Espionage bill, The censorship itself, under the forms proposed, would imitate all the early faults of the English system, in denying news to its own people which was entirely at the disposal of the enemy. It is difficult to say whether the censor is more foolish in what he suppresses or in what he publishes. In either case, the result is the same, the suppression of news values and implications, he indirectly reveals."

"A striking parallel can be drawn from recent events in Washington. A fatal accident through defective shells on the Monocilia was not made public until its force could be blunted by official explanation. At the same time, a piece of news of the highest value to the enemy, the ordering of General Pershing to Europe preliminary to the dispatch of a large force of United States regulars, was made public with no appreciation of its news value. And at the head of the tentative censorship already organized is a director who shows, in his suggestions for voluntary censorship by the newspapers themselves, complete ignorance of the essential principles underlying the collection and distribution of news."

"And the more technical the news is, the more certain is it that the censor will make costly and irritating mistakes. The British censor, for instance, undertook the editing of financial cables to New York, with absurd results. He constantly showed that he did not know the meaning of the news he was attempting to edit. And at the same time it may positively be said that, with the British in control of the cables, the German banking houses in New York and elsewhere were as well as before served, and indeed in some instances were able to beat the news agencies in important items of news."

"A newspaper censorship conducted by expert newspaper men, might be tolerable, but there is no evidence that it would be necessary. Just such a voluntary censorship is being conducted now. Why not let well enough alone? There is plenty of law to punish the publication of news revealing military secrets to the enemy. But Secretary Daniels and Admiral Sims have demonstrated to us that it is not from the newspapers that German spies get their information."

CONSERVE THE CALVES.

Several Rock county livestock societies have passed resolutions urging their respective members not to sell female calves under the age of six months for slaughter. Other Rock county farmers have agreed with themselves not to sell calves for slaughter, and while many have sold calves under the prescribed age they have sold them to other farmers who had plenty of feed to care for them. The following excerpt shows the great necessity for conservation of this source of food supply:

Killing something like 3,000,000 calves a year is one of them. The most of these are under three weeks old. Hundreds of thousands of them are under one week old. We have contended against this wretched traffic for years on the ground of the sufferings endured by these helpless little creatures in transit and at the slaughter-houses. It looks at last as though, on the ground of economy, to conserve the meat supply of the country the nation would some day have sense enough to stop the shameful waste. A bill has been introduced into congress to prohibit the slaughter of any calf under two years of age. The New York Herald says, editorially:

"Residents of cities who complain of the high prices of meats, a condition that has existed since long before the war, are not guiltless in the matter. They insist on demanding veal from their butchers, and in order to supply this demand for a succulent, young meat, millions of calves, weighing from 100 to 150 pounds each, must be slaughtered. If these animals were permitted to live two years instead of a month or six weeks, they would weigh from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds and the shortage in the national meat supply would be less acute. The conservation of young livestock, which means the increase in the country's meat supply and in the enrichment of the soil that is called on to produce the grain and vegetable supplies, is an economic necessity that shocks its importance every time the price of meat rises a fraction of a cent."

THE FARMER'S SIDE OF IT.

The amount of advice being handed out about now to the farmers is something tremendous. Many of us who give this advice know nothing from personal experience about agriculture. Of course any intelligent observer of business and industry can often make just criticisms on other people's work without being able to do it himself. But a good deal of futile and foolish advice is given, and it is no wonder that the farmers feel irritated by it.

The farmers are talking back through the newspapers. They resent the suggestion that they are slow and unbusinesslike and unprogressive, and they ridicule many of the efforts being made to increase farm production. They say farm production is hampered by certain underlying obstacles which must be first removed.

The shortage of good help is the subject of perhaps the most complaint. The farmer speaks very disparagingly of green help. He looks scornfully on the great army of inexperienced college boys to be turned loose on the soil this summer.

The high price of seed and fertilizer and farm machinery, the difficulty of getting loans on growing crops, and the exactions of the middlemen who hold down the farmers' prices while they themselves are gathering a fortune, are other basic conditions which in the farmer's mind hold down food production.

It will take more than farm hints written by city-bred editors to solve such problems. New systems of distribution and loaning of capital must be arranged. Meanwhile the farmer must, like other business men, adjust himself to existing conditions. Let him not estimate too sneeringly the capacity of the college boy. He lacks the experience, but he will put more muscle and enthusiasm into it than two old-time prodding and sluggish farm hands.

CONGRESSIONAL DELAYS.

It has taken over forty days after our declaration of war to pass a law through congress raising an army. In half that time Germany had mobilized her forces and was heading across Belgium. Uncle Sam should realize that he must play the game.

Speed is the first element in war. The army that gets there first and digs itself in is the army that wins. The poorer army that is raised quickly has the big advantage.

Congress meanwhile takes up these matters in its usual leisurely fashion. It should realize that this is no time for extended debate. Let our talkers confine their remarks to five and ten minute speeches. The heart of their opinions can be compressed into that time, and if necessary they can print the rest in the Record, where the junk men will read it anyway.

This is a time for haste if the United States is to help win the war. It is better to make a few mistakes than to delay and deliberate and perhaps in the end do no better.

THE LIBERTY BONDS.

It is up to Janesville to make a record for itself in the purchase of the Liberty Bonds. The great drive is soon to begin and the terms of the purchase are so arranged that every person should be able to buy at least one and thus help the government finance this war. If you can not fight, can not grow crops, you can do your bit by purchasing a Liberty bond that will be as good as gold, and still be aiding in the great cause of humanity.

It is suspected that the boy who used to be in the gardens of the neighborhood will be found this fall coaling himself in his own garden on cool nights with his sling shot loaded for war.

Some of our women friends are so stirred by the demand for domestic economy that they actually venture to go into their kitchens and humbly address the maid.

Perhaps the wheat speculators can stand there indefinitely, thumbing their noses at the whole American people, and then again perhaps they can't.

The people who plan to destroy the German crops by fireballs have thoughtfully given the Germans ninety days' notice of their plans.

It is surprising how much good advice a novice gardener can give the old farmers of the town.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

To the Editor of the Gazette:—
Dear Sir: With much interest I have read the article, "Here at Home," in last night's Gazette.

The instance cited, of the woman who had to cut the potatoes from her grocery order, because the flour alone took all she could afford to spend, is only too true an example of what the average family has got to put up with at present.

"There you are," the article continues, "War prices right here at home, simply because the government does not stop the gambling in provisions, does not do something besides talk and plan."

Now, Mr. Editor, it is not any of my desires to add unnecessarily to this talking and every time some question, however, is in what manner is the government going to stop this gambling in provisions?

I have often thought this question over for myself, and every time come to the conclusion, that this gambling easily could be stopped if a law were passed fixing maximum prices at which the different provisions can be retailed. Such prices to allow a reasonable compensation for producer and middleman both.

I frankly confess not to be an expert in matters of political economy, and therefore, if the proposed remedy is wrong, some one of your readers probably will be kind enough to point out where and why.

If on the contrary the remedy is the right one, why not let all those interested get together and demand from our government that a law as above suggested be passed and put into effect at once.

Yours very truly, H. P.

London, June 1.—"Heiners" is the new name applied by the Canadians to the Germans. With many units it has superseded Fritz, Boche and Hun.

"The preliminary barrage," said a Scottish Canadian N. C. O. in describing an assault, "sounded like someone sitting his hand up the notes of a piano and down again. The guns must have set the Heineys' teeth rattling like peas in a box."

"Before the attack we spotted a sentry in a sap and were told to get him. We went a long way around, but he must have heard us splashing in the mud, for he beat it down a dug-out."

"When we got up to the sap we found it had a little dinner bell hanging to it. He was supposed to ring it when a raid started. But he was an oldish guy with glasses and he didn't think there was time to do it."

HEAD OF PHARMACY SCHOOL

TRENCH TALES.

With the British Armies. June 1.—Three British Tommies, just escaped from a German prison, told of extraordinary bad treatment they had received in many lines of enemy trenches in the escape.
We were first imprisoned in a chalk pit and then transferred to a camp where there were already 1,004 British, French, Russians and Algerians, said one. German officers threatened to shoot some prisoners for refusing information. We were housed in leaky huts, without overcoats or blankets, in the coldest weather. Some of us worked on roads within range of our own guns. Our food was black bread, thin soup and weak coffee. Bathing facilities were nil. We were driven to work under penalty of whippings. There were no doctors and the sick had to hold hard as any of us.

PLAN BIG PARADE AS A FEATURE OF DUTY DAY PROGRAM

All City Organizations to Take Part
In Street Parade-Exercises to Be Held in Court House Park.

Every citizen of Janesville is expected to take part in the demonstration planned for "Duty Day," next Tuesday. It is to be a city-wide expression of patriotism as a tribute to the young men between twenty-one and thirty-one who register on that day for possible service at the front.

Under the direction of the Duty Day committee named by the Commercial Club last Monday plans for the celebration are rapidly taking form, and arrangements are being made to include every organization, every school child, every citizen.
The feature of the day will be a parade leading up to exercises to be held in the Court House Park. At two o'clock under the direction of Chief Marshal Charles Punnam, the parade units will assemble at Park street, from there the line of march will be up Pleasant street to Academy to Milwaukee, down Milwaukee to Main, south on Main to Court, and from there to the Court House, where the speakers will be assembled on the balcony.

Heading the procession will be the Boyer City Band with thirty pieces, followed by the speakers, the mayor and prominent citizens in motor cars. Then the Grand Army men, the Spanish War Veterans, Company M, all men who register for service, all fraternal organizations, the W. R. C. and ladies auxiliaries and all women's organizations, the entire student body and faculty of the High School and the children of the grade schools.
Every organization is expected to march in a body and it is the urgent request of the committee that all take their part even if they have been overlooked in the sending out of invitations. Every man who registers on Tuesday is urged to take his place in the line of march, arranged in honor of them. The Boy Scouts will serve as assistant marshalls, being delegated as an official escort for the smaller school children.

The exercises at the Court House are scheduled to begin at a quarter to three and include a number of inspiring addresses, appropriate to the occasion and expressing the significance of the day. There will be singing by the school children and by the entire assembly, and a dedication of the Liberty Loan. The program an exhibition drill by Company M.
Factory groups and professional men of all kinds are expected to take part in the parade. It is to be a city-wide manifestation of the patriotism of the day, and men in every walk in life are expected to be represented.

The federation of women's clubs will station ladies at each of the registration places where duty it will be to present to each man who registers a small insignia of duty. Red, white and blue rosette of ribbon will be given the men.

FIND DRUG CACHE IN LUMBER YARD

Two Bottles Containing Narcotics Delivered Police After Discovery
Drug Percentage Small.

A bottle of crystals and one of pills, the latter termed "belly-ache dope" by the police, and the first recognized as a weak narcotic and only used by those drug addicts whose education in narcotics have advanced beyond the primary stage of the beginner, have been found in the Quinn coal and wood yard on North River street. As far as can be determined the drugs were not taken from any local drug store or physician's office; at least their loss had not been discovered at the time of investigation.

The cache, if it really was one, gives the police a new angle to follow in the cases of local drug addicts. On the other hand the drugs might have been tossed aside by a transient user when he determined that their nature was insufficient to satisfy his craving.
The crystals were a chloral hydrate. They are employed as a hypnotic by physicians. In the case of the drug "hend" they are also used to some extent but the weakness of the drug is such that the addict rarely uses it except when this only is obtainable to offset the intense nervous effects of the stronger drug. The crystals are then taken to ease physical condition through sleep. They are also used in the case of a person virtually shaken by drink.

The pills contain a small percentage of a paralytic, or opium, and are really a colic. They would be stolen for the small amount of narcotic they contain.

HOW TO CLEAN YOUR AUTOMOBILE

An Easy Matter to Preserve the Beauty of the Body Finish

The following instructions are being sent out to owners by a number of leading motor car manufacturers: "By giving the body of your car simple care you can keep it looking like new for several seasons, avoiding the cost of repainting and greatly enhancing its second-hand value."

"Tobey Polish, made from the old secret shop formula of The Tobey Furniture Company, (Chicago & New York), is a perfect preparation for cleaning and maintaining the fine body surfaces of our cars. It cleanses, thoroughly and quickly; removes foggy appearance; obscures small scratches; preserves the body and color of the varnish. It wipes off dry without hard rubbing and does not collect the dust. It makes washing unnecessary, except to remove mud and grit.

"The time to begin is when your car is new; don't wait until the finish goes dead and then try to restore it." You can obtain Tobey Polish from your own supply dealer, or any store where high quality polishes are sold, in 25c, 50c and $1 sizes.

"It would be useless. There's too much of it. No, if we're going to save the dam, we've got to build it up and try to keep about of the waters if they rise any more. The higher you can build it the greater will be the head on the spillway, and the more will be discharged. I'll turn the men out at once."

"But what are you going to do?"
"I'm going to palisade the top of the dam. There's plenty of timber already cut down, and we will cut a lot of young pines and build a palisade wall of timber across the top three or four feet back from the edge. Well banked on the downstream side, it may hold."

"I might be worth while to line that palisade with galvanized iron sheets from the houses," said Meade.

"A good idea," said Vandeventer. "And we'll pile what underbrush and small stuff we have in front of the palisade and heap what rocks we can find on top of that, and we'll bank it up on the other side with earth. It's a poor dependence, but it will hold for a while anyway, and every moment of time may be precious."

"How about sandbags, sir?"

"We've got a few hundred cement bags, but not enough. I wish we had a few thousand; however, we will fill what we have, and if the water rises and begins to trickle over the top and through the palisade, we'll jam those down at the danger points. Can you suggest anything more?"

"Nothing."

"Good. We'll turn out the men. They've had six hours' sleep anyway."

CHAPTER XV.

The Battle.

It was now three o'clock in the morning. In about half an hour the men, naturally grumbling and protesting at being deprived of any of their sleep, were out and at work. Lanterns were lighted everywhere. The rain had fortunately not resumed, and the air was soon filled with noise and confusion. Men with axes were busy on the hillside cutting the young pines. Horses were hitched to the dump wagons, the steam shovel began tearing away the hillside. Some of the men were detailed to knock down some of the galvanized iron houses and the battering of the hammers on the metal added to the din.

THE WAR WILL MAKE MEN SCARCE AT THE SUMMER RESORTS

Under Vandeventer's personal direction a row of stakes was driven into the top of the dam about three feet from the front of it. Big sheets of overlapping galvanized iron were nailed roughly to the fronts of the staked stakes and the small branches and brushwood were thrown down before it. Bowlders and big stones were carried out on the dam in the wagons and thrown down on the brushwood; spare timbers, broken wagon beds, old wheels, joists of dismembered houses were driven into the earth to serve as braces behind the palisade; a bank of earth was piled up behind it, on which every man who could be spared from other tasks, even the chiefs themselves, labored with breathless energy. The water was still rising, although the rails had stopped; the natural drainage would cause that, but the rise was slower.

At dawn Vandeventer personally carefully measured the depth of the water and gauged it again. It was a scant six and a half feet below the top of the dam. If the water rose above the top it was gravely questionable whether the palisade would hold it at all, yet there was no other way of increasing the depth of the spillway enough to discharge the flood volume.

Working as hard as they could, they had barely succeeded in raising the earth bank back of it a foot high. They kept at it unrelentingly, although it did not seem to be of much use. Vandeventer, Stafford and Meade gathered together and scanned the sky, seeking to discern the signs of the time, the purpose of the heavens. It was clearer in the east. The clouds to the northward were in violent action apparently. Lightning flashed through them and over the great range itself; low, muttered peals of thunder came down from the peaks lost to sight in the blackness overhead. They observed all this carefully and Vandeventer turned away, shaking his head.

"I don't know," he began—the three of them were over on the east side the better to see up the valley—"it looks pretty bad, doesn't it?"

"It does," answered Meade, while Stafford nodded his head.

"And, by the way, Stafford, have you notified the town and the bridge people of the danger and bid them prepare for it?"

"I tried to telephone them a while ago, but the connection has been broken; the storm has played havoc with the line probably," answered the assistant engineer.

"Well, what did you do then?" asked Vandeventer a little impatiently.

"I sent a man down on horseback in a hurry to warn them that if it rains again the dam might go, and if it did it would go with a rush; that the water was now only six feet below the level, and that they had better get up on the hills. Of course, last night's rain must have made the road almost impassable, but he ought to get there by nine o'clock. I told him to tell the Martlet people to take whatever steps they could devise to hold their viaduct and their machinery," answered Stafford, as he turned and walked toward his own part of the dam.

"Good," exclaimed Vandeventer. "There's nothing left for us to do but keep on."

The resident engineer looked white and haggard. Although it was cold and raw in the wet air, he wiped the sweat from his forehead.

"The men are doing splendidly, sir," said Meade.

"Yes," said Vandeventer, "many of them have their wives and children back in the town. Some of the Italians have bought land on the prairie and are going to settle here. They're fighting for everything they've got on earth. What do you think of the chances of this palisade of ours?"

Meade shook his head.

"It's all we can do, sir, but if the water rises more than seven or eight feet—"

"Say it," said Vandeventer.

"The dam would go like a house of cards."

"Exactly. And look at that cloud-bank over there in the northwest. It's spreading."

"What wind there is," said Meade, moistening his finger and holding it up to feel the direction. "It's blowing the opposite way down here, but you can't tell what is happening up there. Well, all we can do is to fight on."

And fight they did. It was almost at first sight like the hand of man against the hand of God. There was no more room for engineering expedient. It was chop and hew, break and pound, dig and drive, carry and pile. Throwing off his coat, Vandeventer seized a spade and began to work like any other laborer, and the rest of the higher men followed his example.

At six o'clock the blackness hanging in the northwest began to turn their way. It was coming down the mountain. It was headed for the valley. Vandeventer saw it, every teamster, every common laborer saw it. It was coming. Unless heaven itself interfered there would be more rain. They had worked desperately before, but now they applied themselves to their tasks with a kind of wild fury. A sort of insanity took possession of them. They would not be beaten. They cried, at first shrilly and then hoarsely and raucously, encouraging words and phrases from one to another; in words vivid, profane, desperate. They stood there and they heaved and dug and piled and hammered and hurled and drove fiercely. It was a battle madness that came into them. They saw red like the berserker of old. Yes, it was not unlike a battle in other ways, for with the rush of the northwest storm came roaring mighty thunder and vivid and terrifying lightning. It was as if great darts of light literally were hurled by some gigantic hand behind the black screen of sweeping cloud down upon the granite mountains. They saw splinters of fire where the thunderbolts struck. The pealing of thunder was appalling.

Their trail palisade backing was not half completed. It must be raining somewhere, for the water was still slowly rising. It was five and a half feet now from the crest. It was hopeless if another rain fell, and the rain was coming. There was an added chill in the still air of the valley as the storm drove down upon them. A few of the fainter hearts flung down pick and shovel and ax and stood craven. Oaths, curses, blows even, from those of the braver sort shamed them into work again. These brave hearts and true might be swept away with the dam if it gave way, but they would not give up, and no man working with them should see his task or shirk his duty. By the living God, whose sport and plaything they seemed to be, they swore it; and so weak and strong, bold and timid labored on—desperate, resolved, godlike in their courage and persistence.

The clouds were moving swiftly now. To the east it had been clear, but now it was also black, and then with a roar greater even than a thousand thunderclaps, the wind tore down the mountains, through the narrow canyons, into the valleys, shrieking in the pines, and fell upon them and buried them down and brushed them back. And after the wind, the rain. A drop or two struck Vandeventer's cheek; another, another, and then the flood. He lifted his head and stared and shook his fist at the sky and turned to the human termite he commanded.

Corn Right Off

Shrivels, Loosens—and It's Gone!
"Just like taking the lid off—that's how easy you can lift a corn off your toe after it has been treated with the wonderful 'Gets-It.' Gets the wide world order and you'll find nothing so magic, simple and easy as 'Gets-It.' You folks who have strapped your toes in bandages to look like bundles, who have used salves that turned your toes raw and sore, and used plasters that would shift from their place and never 'get' the corn, and who have dug and picked at your corns with knives and saws and perhaps made them bleed—just quit these old and painful ways and try 'Gets-It' just once. There's nothing to stick. You can put your shoe and stocking right on again. The pain is all gone. Then the corn dies a painless, shriveling death. It loosens from your toe and off it comes. 'Gets-It' is the biggest selling corn remedy in the world today. There's none other as good. 'Gets-It' is sold by druggists everywhere. See a bottle, or send on receipt of price by E. "Carry on, carry on, boys," he cried, shrieking to be heard above the thunder peals, "we'll beat it yet."

A cheer rose about him and was caught up and ran along the top of the great dam. The half-mad yells were such a cry as men might give vent to in the heat of battle, the excitement of wild charge, and then they fell to it again. The more ignorant, unaware of the feebleness of the pal-

Dinner Stories

A kind-hearted old gentleman came upon a small whimpering urchin in the gutter. "What's the matter, my little man?" he asked sympathetically. "I'm lost. Boo-hoo!" "Lost? Nonsense! We mustn't give up hope so soon. Where do you live?" "I don't know, sir," whined the youngster. "We've just moved, and I can't remember the address."

"Well, what's your name?" "I don't know, sir,"

"Don't know?" exclaimed the old gentleman.

"No," sobbed the urchin. "My mother got married again this morning. A tactful and delicate even for a Frenchman, was the reply made by a Parisian who had not found 'life on the ocean wave' all for which one could wish. He was sinking, pale and haggard into his steamer chair, when his neighbor cheerfully said: 'Have you breakfasted, monsieur?'"

"No, monsieur," answered the Frenchman with a wan smile. "I have not breakfasted. On the contrary."

"Why are you leaving us, Mary? Haven't I treated you right?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am, I have been treat-

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Backache? Rheumatism? Run-Down?

Those of us who are past middle age are prone to eat too much meat and in consequence deposit lime-salts in the arteries, veins and joints. We often suffer from twinges of rheumatism or lumbago, sometimes from gout, swollen hands or feet. There is no longer the slightest need of this, however, as the new prescription, Anuric, is bound to give immediate results as it is many times more potent than lithin, in ridding the impoverished blood of its poisons by way of the kidneys. It can be obtained at almost any drug store, by simply asking for Anuric for kidneys and backache. It will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant arising from bed at night.

BEAN BALL RUINS PROMISING PLAYERS

When Outfielder Thrasher, for whom Connie Mack doled out $15,000 last winter, was shunted back to the Southern association, another victim of the "bean ball" was added to the long string credited to that unnecessary and dangerous method of pitching.

Thrasher, one of the most prominent youngsters who ever flashed in major league company, was going along fine. He was hitting fairly well and his fielding was spectacular. One day he was hitting in a game against the Red Sox. The ball took him on the side of the head.

Thrasher dropped as if he had been shot. He was "out" for some time and when he revived was sent home. The next day found him back in the game, but he was pulling back from the plate. He never had forgotten that "bean ball."

Nothing could be done for him. He just simply couldn't stand up to the plate and wait for those fast balls. He pulled. Maybe Thrasher will lose his fear of "bean balls." Maybe he will return to the American league, but if he does he will have done something no other ball player has accomplished. Many of them have gone out only to fall victim to the "bean ball." Some of them have returned for another chance, but the fear of injury always makes their batting awkward.

There was Roy Corhan, one of the most sensational infielders ever called from the minors. He was purchased by the White Sox several years ago and was the sensation of early and late games until someone cracked him on the head with a ball. Corhan, who had been hitting well, immediately began to fall away from the plate. His usefulness as a big league player over and he was sent to San Francisco.

In San Francisco Corhan again began to hit and field sensationally and he was tried again. It was the same story. The deadly force of the big league "bean ball" couldn't be removed.

Corhan has had several trials since then, but every time he was sent back. A demon hitter in the minors, he can't do anything with his league pitching. The "bean ball" is responsible.

If Huchey Downes' ability to size up a pitcher was just as good as his ability to pick men for other positions, he probably would establish a great monopoly on American league contracts. There are several ex-Tigers, including big league players, who have been sent back to the minors from any other club.
